North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO)

from The American Economy: A Historical Encyclopedia

A collective security alliance organized under the North Atlantic Treaty of 1949.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) was formed by the North Atlantic Treaty of 1949. Original members were the United States, the United Kingdom, Canada, France, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Norway, Denmark, and Iceland. Later several more European countries joined NATO: Greece and Turkey (1952), Germany (1955), Spain (1982), and Hungary, Poland, and the Czech Republic (1999). Russia joined in 2002, and NATO Allies decided at the 2002 summit in Prague to invite seven other countries to join: Bulgaria, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Romania, Slovakia, and Slovenia. Over the years, NATO commitments have consumed the greatest share of America's defense budget. By the end of the twentieth century the NATO countries counted for some 40 percent of U.S. foreign trade ($684.478 million), including 44 percent ($308.478 million) and 37 percent ($376,000 million) of American exports from and imports to foreign countries, respectively.

The U.S.-sponsored European Recovery Program (the Marshall Plan), a massive financial aid package to Western Europe, laid a foundation for the collective security scheme by developing a shared belief that only an economically rehabilitated Europe could effectively resist potential communist subversion or Soviet aggression. Since January 1950 when NATO approved plans for integrated, or coordinated, defense against the Soviet Union, the United States has subsidized the massive buildup and rearmament of Western Europe. Additionally, by the end of the 1960s the United States
